Incumbents hang on in the face of change, term limits

By PAUL WOLF

ITS LIKE two famous political slogans colliding: "Throw the bums out" and "Not in my backyard."

Change may have been a theme nationwide, but the well-established Democratic incumbents comfortably held their seats in the three regional legislative battles. The message, not confined to the Monterey County, was: Get rid of the rascals, but not on my turf.

With the biggest margin of victory, Rep. Leon Panetta secured 68.8 percent of the vote against his 17th District opponent, Republican Bill McCampbell, who garnered only 27.3 percent.

Sam Farr, a multiple-term incumbent in the 27th state assembly district, had the most serious challenge from Republican Susan Whitman — the two earning 55.5 percent and 41 percent respectively.

State Sen. Henry Mello, representing the 15th state senate district, captured 56.2 percent to Edward Laverone's 36.8 percent.

The anti-incumbent mood — as expressed in the overwhelming victory of Prop. 164, pushing Congressional term limits — may have meant more in theory than in practice.

Carmel-by-the-Sea has 4,022 registered voters. They went overwhelmingly for Bill Clinton, and, generally, they voted in step with the county and state electorates on Measure A and the string of propositions.

Carmel voters went to the polls showing the third highest voter turnout among the 13 county jurisdictions — 12 cities and the unincorporated areas. Of registered voters in Carmel, 74.6 percent cast their ballots. That compares with a 69.3 percent for the county as a whole.

Commenting on his victory, Panetta, a Carmel Valley resident, acknowledged there has been "anger and frustration" expressed by many California voters with the status quo. But, he added, "people look at a candidate's ability to represent their interests," referring to his own successes leading the marine sanctuary movement and his close rapport with the people of his district.

Rumors persist that Panetta is being groomed for a cabinet position in the Clinton administration, perhaps for the Office of Budget and Management. McCampbell's campaign manager, Lynn Fillman, says his candidate would still be available if Panetta vacates, and if the governor calls a special election for the 17th District.

Meanwhile, Whitman, a Pacific Grove resident with long experience on that town's city council, vows to run again in 1994. "I've made the strongest showing of anyone running against Sam. I'm really pleased at the number of votes I received. It was difficult being a Republican running for anything this year."

Whitman noted she was outspent roughly six-to-one.

Not the first to say so, Mello argued the anti-incumbent sentiment has been directed at political institutions rather than individuals.

Modestly, she assumes role of 'inspector'

By JOHN DETRO

AT A point on Tuesday afternoon, the soft voice of Elaine Williams took on fervency. The process — Carmel helping to select this nation's next president — seemed to glow anew, like fireplace coals, as she spoke.

"People at this precinct," she said, "have displayed a certain spirit. Do you remember World War Two—when Americans all moved in one direction? Well, the day has been like that so far. People take this election seriously, and they have strength of purpose. That's my observation, at any rate."

And an educated observation it was. Elaine carried the title of Inspector at the polling place in Park Branch Library across from Devendorf Park. She and the other Carmelites who'd volunteered there — Angie Hocker, Audrey McCormack,

Carmel hit by car buglars; police make batch of arrests

By PAUL WOLF

CARMEL-BY-the-Sea has been hammered by an unprecedented series of vehicle burglaries that has caused police to step up their efforts to end the week-and-a-half-long crisis.

On Tuesday night, police arrested three people in connection with some of the incidents. The three are residents are from Marina, Seaside and Pacific Grove.

"We think they are reponsible for a good number of the incidents," said Carmel Det. Sgt. Pete Poitras.

Between Oct. 22 and Nov. 1, roughly two dozen cars were simply walked into or entered by the culprits smashing windows. Items stolen range from a tennis racket and briefcase to fancy stereo equipment.

"We are redoubling our efforts and asking everyone to assist us," Poitras said, noting there are three to four groups committing the crimes.

The car burglaries are being carried out in the neighboring cities and in the unincorporated areas.

The message from police is: use your garage if you have one, or install an alarm in your vehicle.

At the very least, residents should lock their car doors and report any suspicious activity to the police.

Another group of suspects was arrested in Pacific Grove Thursday, Oct. 29. The group may well be connected with incidents in Carmel, but Poitras said he is not certain.

Carmel police have a warrant out for the arrest of yet three others in connection with one of the Carmel incidents.

Despite rains, drought persists, water officials say

THE PENINSULA water district may have ended its "water supply emergency" last April, but district officials insist the district has opened the new water calendar in its seventh year of drought.

No smoking at CHS

OUR PUBLIC schools — anywhere — have always had the unenviable task of enforcing society's rules.

Your hair is too long, your skirt is too short. You must read this, you can't read that. No skateboards on the school bus. You're not dressed for P.E. You're too loud, you're not participating.

Discipline. That certainly had something to do with why our old friend Holden Caulfield had so much trouble in school. Why, it even got to the point where he wouldn't even open up a history book; he was so intimidated.

"What are schools for?" he'd ask.

We think that question may be in the asking these days at Carmel High where a no-smoking ban is being considered, although there is a general consensus that it would be near impossible to enforce. To our way of thinking, smoking is not the issue here. The issue, we believe, is a matter of personal freedom versus disciplining our youth.

We argue that a ban against smoking on campus is one thing, but to extend that restriction off-campus is an entirely different matter. Smoking is dumb, but the attempt to educate teenagers to that fact by Draconian law is equally so.

Letters to the editor are welcome. Views on all matters are acceptable, following the guidelines of good taste. Letters must not exceed 250 words in length. A little background

Dear Editor:

Your recent article on the Monterey Peninsula Regional Park District's Mill Creek Preserve project, "Park district's Mill Creek Preserve plan rejected," may have left readers with the impression that County Planning Commission denial of the use permit for the project was unjustified.

A little more background reveals the denial to be entirely justified, and the district's pursuit of the project to be rich with distortions of the democratic process, political corruption, and disinformation. For example:

Public sentiment at the the only public hearing on the aquisition of the property was 30 opposed versus two in favor. The District proceeded anyway.

A referendum petition signed by more than twice the number of district voters required by law was submitted to put the acquisition to a vote. The District refused to process the petitions.

The Director of the Fair Political Practices Commission found district director Zad Leavy had repeatedly violated conflict of interest laws over the acquisition.

Now the district is arguing they are forced to develop the property for recreation; yet they argued in Monterey County Superior Court they could hold the property as undeveloped open space in order to circumvent doing an EIR on the purchase; and the Prop. 70 money used for the purchase was earmarked for "acquisition of wildlife and riparion habitat...".

The Planning Commission reached its decision after visiting the site and preparing a study of other recreation areas already avaiable in the area. Another one is not needed in Palo Colorado Canyon.

The district should stop trying to justify this acquisition through recreational use and leave the property as an undeveloped preserve.

Deepest thanks

Dear Editor:

Several weeks ago, on a beautiful, balmy evening, while enjoying a walk on the beach pathway, a raccoon skittered in front of me. Instinctively, I moved to the left, hit a huge boulder and suffered a serious fall.

I want to say a public and heartfelt thank you to a number of considerate people who came to my rescue. To the two young women who heard me scream, saw that I had blacked out and was bleeding profusely, I am most appreciative of your kindness in insisting that you drive me to the fire department.

I am grateful also to the paramedics who spent a long time ministering to me. Carmel-by-the-Sea is very lucky to have such concerned, gentle professionals. I feel the same way about members of the fire department and the police officer who eventually took me back to my car and waited to see that I could drive the short distance home.

Thank you, too, to City Forester Gary Kelly. He promised me he would take action, and soon the boulder was removed from the path. I wound up with a concussion, deep cuts, etc. But no bones were broken, and I feel extremely lucky. I believe someone 20 years older might not have been so fortunate.

In order to avoid similar accidents, I would like to suggest the city consider making slight modifications or repairs to the stairs at the Scout House and other public places where stone, chalk rock or the occasional boulder can be treacherous.

Again, my deepest thanks to all concerned.

Talking costs

Dear Editor:

The price of our local public transit from Carmel to Carmel Valley has been too expensive to be effective in reducing traffic congestion.

Very few people are willing to pay $5 for the round trip. Even if one starts a trip near the mouth of Carmel Valley and travels to Carmel, the price of the round trip is still $5. So the short 2.1 mile trip from Rancho Canada to the Carmel Mission is very expensive. Because of the high price of the buses in Carmel Valley, they are often nearly empty.

However, Monterey-Salinas Transit (MST) is going to lower the bus fare on this route on an experimental basis for six months to see if lower bus prices will result in more riders and less traffic congestion. Essentially, the fare zone boundary is being moved farther out into the valley.

One will be able to travel from Mid-Valley Shopping Center to any point on the Monterey Peninsula for a round trip price of $2.50, as opposed to the present $5. The bus price will be cut in half starting Saturday, November 7, 1992.

Here lies an opportunity for environmentally concerned persons to demonstrate that affordable mass transit is indeed an alternative to new and wider highways — specifically the Hatton Canyon Freeway and the widening of Carmel Valley Road. In fact, if everyone who regularly drives Carmel Valley Road would take the Carmel Valley bus just once a week, the traffic on that road would fall below the trigger level specified in the Carmel Valley Master Plan and there would be no need for expensive road improvements.

The Carmel Valley bus is quite convenient, taking a direct route along Carmel Valley Road, going to Carmel, then to Monterey. On weekdays, a morning commuter bus offers express service from Carmel Valley to downtown Monterey. The bus ride from Carmel Valley Village to downtown Carmel takes only 30 minutes, about the same as driving. And unlike driving, one has a chance to sit back and enjoy the newspaper or catch up on other reading.

Getting on the bus east of Mid-Valley Shopping Center will still cost $5 for the round trip to Carmel or Monterey. So a person can drive the car to Mid-Valley Shopping Center and get on the bus. Hopefully, MST will see a large increase in

WITH MEASURE A's defeat, the La Raza, Seaside and Marina map will be the one most likely to be approved by the U. S. District Court in San Jose. It provides only one seat on the county board of supervisors representing the areas that comprise the largest tax base.

In wake of Measure A's defeat

Supes plan to petition court

MEASURE A's defeat does not bring to an end the uphill battle for supporters of the Monterey County Board of Supervisors redistricting map.

The board's map offered two Hispanic districts and two districts -- instead of just one -- that take in the county's largest tax base and, supporters say, the most environmentally conscious representation.

"It's up to the judge now," said Karin Strasser Kauffman, chair of Monterey's supervisorial board. "But, I hope we can convince the court to let the public participate in the decision making. It would be a great disservice to every community in the county to have a map imposed on us that no one has seen."

Out of 45 or more maps presented to the U. S. District Court in San Jose, she said that the most likely map to be approved is the one submitted by the La Raza Redistricting Committee in coordination with Seaside and Marina.

That map, however, has never been publicly reviewed.

The alternative La Raza map provides Hispanic representation, but it differs with the supervisorial map in that it puts Seaside and Marina into one district, and places all of the other Monterey Peninsula cities into one district rather than the two that Measure A put forward.

"The La Raza map dilutes the historic representation of the peninsula," she said. "There's a great deal at stake. For example, the protection of the peninsula's tax base and its commitment to environmental issues."

Fran Farina, member of the Vote Yes on Measure A Committee, said that she was not surprised by the outcome of the vote.

"The level of confusion was astronomical. Now, we just have to wait for the judges ruling. It's vitually a done deal."

Dick Heuer, also a member of the committee, said that Measure A was put on the ballot by the people opposed to the supervisor's map.

"They were very well-organized. We were at a significant disadvantage," said Heuer. "Now, the question is whether the judge is planning to do this alone or if there will be an opportunity for public hearings."

CHS students pick winners in mock election

By SCOTT BREARTON

WITH COLORFUL hand-made posters expounding the virtues of presidential hopefuls gracing the walls of the Carmel High School campus, one might think an election was in progress.

It was.

CHS students and staff overwhelmingly preferred Bill Clinton to be the next President of the United States in a mock general election held Nov. 2 in the campus library.

"I like Clinton because he's really down to earth and I like his economic plans more than Bush or Perot," said 11th-grader Jeff McGee.

Clinton takes it

Of the 578 students that voted, 268 chose Clinton and 204 picked Ross Perot. President George Bush finished a distant third with 75 votes. Other candidates collected the remaining 31 votes.

Tenth-grader Mahlon McAnaney said he liked Perot "because he was the only candidate who actually talked about the issues and made any sense."

Of 43 CHS staff members that voted, 25 picked Clinton, 11 chose Perot, and six selected Bush.

Increasing interest

Organizer and library aide Linda Carr said the main function of the mock election was to increase voting interest among students. History teachers Bob Swartz, Jack Ellena, and Jeffrey Wright also helped organize the election and briefed students on candidates' positions on particular issues.

Carr said this year's election generated considerably more interest among young people than in previous elections.

"I think it (the mock election) gets them enthusiastic about the election and about voting in general," Carr said.

This interest is reflected in the record number of registered voters in Monterey County, with many young adults voting for the first time. According to Monterey County Registrar of Voters Brad Clark, 160, 821 residents registered to vote this year.

"That's an all-time record," Clark said. "We've never had activity like this before," he added, noting the previous high of 145,094 registered voters during the 1988 presidential election was smashed this year.

Television's role

Clark said he thinks television has played a big role in increasing voter registration and interest among young people. "I think MTV has had a lot to do with it – you know, their 'Rock the Vote' concert," Clark said.

He said local networks have also been very helpful, airing public service announcements encouraging people to exercise their right to participate in government.

Striving for authenticity, Carr obtained actual sample ballots from the County Registrar of Voters. Students voted for president, state assemblymen and senators, and U.S. representatives and senators (full- and short-term). Distributing campaign literature was forbidden within 100 feet of the polling place.

Incumbents Henry Mello, Sam Farr, and Leon Panetta won out easily over their Republican opponents in the mock election. Carr cited the incumbents' familiarity and local roots as possible reasons for their popularity.

Students proudly wore their "I Voted" stickers afterward to show they had participated.

"We've really enjoyed it," Carr said. "The library enjoys being the election central, the hub of the campus."

Moving on

DAVID MARADEI, 50, received a Certificate of Appreciation from the Carmel City Council upon his retirement as station manager of the Carmel-by-the-Sea Post Office.

County symphony launches new music series

By JOHN DETRO

THE CREATION of a four-concert chamber music and chamber orchestra series was announced Wednesday by Monterey County Symphony Music Director Clark Suttle.

Suttle revealed that the series will be held at Mayflower Presbyterian Church in Pacific Grove and will carry the overall title Music at the Mayflower.

He said the new development was supported, in part, by grants from the City of Pacific Grove, Roundtable Pizza "and more than 50 founding members."

Initial effort

The first concert — Brass Choirs and Candlelight — will happen at 7:30 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 19, featuring music for brass choir, percussion and chorus performed in candlelight and organized by principal trumpet Adam Gordon. Suttle will conduct.

Concert number two: Chorus Americana at 7:30 p.m. Saturday, Feb. 20, 1993. Chorus Director Ken Ahrens will conduct the program of choral music by American composers.

Number three: Piano and Strings on Thursday, March 18, with Irish pianist John O'Connor, concertmaster Phillip Levy, principal violist Katherine Johnk, principal cellist Peter Gelfand and doublebass virtuoso Suttle performing Schubert. Same start time.

Number four: Sumptuous Strings at 2 p.m. Sunday, April 25. Suttle will conduct 13 members of the string section and harpsichord soloist Ahrens.

Prices told

Series ticket costs were given as $50 (adults) and $25 (children). Single tickets were valued at $15 and $8. Advance purchases were recommended due to "very limited seating" — 624-8511.

"Pacific Grove Arts Commission," Suttle said, "was instrumental in securing a commitment of public funds for the establishment of this series...(which) has been a long-time goal...(Such) expansion is the natural direction for a symphony orchestra that is so fortunate to have many talented, knowledgeable and versatile musicians."

Joleyn Heinen — passed out the ballots and made sure every single one was cast according to law.

Any certain age?

That strength of purpose, Elaine was asked — did it radiate from any particular age group?

"No," she said. "We've had a lot of young people, middle-aged people, older citizens. What I've seen today is that they're sharing it. There's so much enthusiasm this time. Yes, I've worked presidential elections before. I was sick last week, and you must forgive my laryngitis, but there's no way I would miss what's going on here. There was a line when we opened the doors this morning. As you see, there's a line right now. We (precinct workers) haven't chatted or had our normal coffee breaks."

PRECINCT INSPECTOR ELAINE WILLIAMS

The question about specific numbers was referred to Angie, who said they'd logged "400 ballots thus far (2:30 p.m.) — a good quarter more than at the same time in any other election" she'd served.

A precinct worker "for many years," Elaine Williams added: "This is a good way to meet and greet my neighbors periodically, to keep the democratic process in process. I think we (four) all take great pride in doing so. Doing so makes one feel very, very good."

She was quick to credit the other ladies. "Please don't make too much of that (Inspector) title. They taught me how to do the job. Audrey (who signed in people and made sure they were legally registered) didn't leave her chair for the first six hours. The turnout's fantastic. Every booth was full until about noon, and the stream of voters has been steady since then."

She had the sense that this election brought out "many more newly-registered voters...People who haven't voted very often — well, they came and voted this time. And they're serious about it. Serious without getting irritable — serious, cordial, very pleasant crowd."

Their central ballot box, Elaine explained, was padlocked first thing Tuesday morning.

Then it wouldn't be unlocked until after the precinct closed at 8 p.m. Ballots would be placed in sealed packets. "And two of us always deliver ballots to (the official tally center in) Salinas — no one person is ever alone with the votes."

Inside information

And, she stressed, precinct workers never should be seen as having inside information.

"There's no electioneering here, no political gossip, no updates heard from newscasters.

We're kind of isolated—and that's as it should be. I really won't know anything about the national election until I get home and turn on the TV."

Elaine Williams smiled; the fervency returned. "I'm positive about participating. And so are the other ladies who work here. And so are the Park Branch voters."

Tree activists to spark interest in planting pines

By PAUL WOLF

CARMEL-BY-the-Sea's most eager tree activists are asking residents to perform a simple unselfish act: plant a pine tree, not for themselves, but for the generations to come.

Carmel is witnessing an unfolding crisis — one that is as profound as it is gradual. It is losing its pines on private property. The character of the town's touted urban forest is at stake.

Carmel's Friends of the Forest plan to act now. "We are planting a seed in people's minds that there is an impending loss here," said the group's president, Karen Ferlito.

Those active with the group plan to go door to door, to every household in town. They will explain to residents the slow-developing crisis, ask if they wish to participate, and even plant the seedlings and show them how to care for the trees.

It could take as long as four years to blanket the entire city of more than 4,000 residents. "I see this as an ongoing project for the Friends of the Forest," said treasurer Steve Brooks. "This is not some one-shot thing."

While a working plan for the project will be ironed out this month, Brooks said, group leaders are clear on the overall mission: to interest as many people in town in accepting and tending a pine tree.

A city survey made public last month reported that, over the past 20 years, the number of pines located on residential lots within the city limits has dropped from 3,519 to 3,017.

Moreover, while that drop is only 14 percent, the number of small pines, with diameters of 18 inches or less, has decreased by 31 percent.

Commitment from residents

The city has worked hard to maintain and rejuvenate the pine forest in public areas. But a commitment on the part of residents has been needed if pines on residential property are to continue to dominate the residential canopy. City officials have noted that exotic landscaping trees have been popular among many residents, who are, in effect, doing a disservice to the urban forest as a whole.

Because it takes decades for a pine to come of age, residents are being asked to view the project as an investment in the future. "It's an unselfish acts; its an act done in the community's interest, not your own."

Ferlito and Brooks suggested it doesn't take long to plant a tree for someone. The most cumbersome part of the project is making contact with people, making a pitch and drawing their cooperation.

Brooks has said he expects to be met with a certain resistance, even though not too much is asked of anyone, and the goals of the project are quite wholesome.

ridership significantly. Concerned citizens who want better can call Frank Lichtanski, general manager of MST at 899-2558, and request that the price of the bus be lowered all the way to Carmel Valley Village. Supervisor Karin Strasser Kauffman is chairwoman of the MST Bus Board and also needs calls at 647-7755. These people need to know that lowering the bus fare to Carmel Valley Village will induce many new riders and be profitable.

The more people who use our local buses, the better the service and prices can be. Although local bus service is good, MST buses are more expensive and infrequent than buses of other local transit districts because there aren't enough riders on them. Mass transit is a valuable means to reduce both traffic and pollution, and it needs our financial help through the farebox to grow and prosper. Information on local buses is available by calling MST at 899-2555. People who haven't ever used our buses, or haven't used them for years, can order a First Time Rider's Kit offering tickets good for free introductory rides.

CBA hopes radiant Carmel will be boon for commerce

By PAUL WOLF

COULD CARMEL'S Christmas season help turn around slumping business?

Some merchants and Carmel Business Association leaders are hoping that may be the case. And whether or not it is a bustling Christmas this year, it will be a radiant one.

If all goes to plan, a lighted and welcoming downtown should be ready for the holidays. At its meeting Tuesday, Nov. 3, the Carmel City Council approved the CBA's project to put in electrical power down the center islands of Ocean Avenue.

Very dramatic

"In the past we've invited people to do a Carmel Christmas, and they have been greeted by a single lighted Christmas tree (at the foot of Ocean at Junipero Avenue)," said CBA Executive Director Toni Jepson. "All the trees down Ocean will be lit; it will be very dramatic."

So far, the CBA has raised $11,670, with donations from a total of 32 business businesses ranging from $25 to $2,500.

Because of its own financial hardships, the city council, however, will not authorize the city to contribute to the funding of the project. The CBA has shelled out $2,500 in seed money.

All-weather paintings

Besides the lights, decorations will include, for starters, all-weather paintings on canvas donated by local artists, according to Jepson.

Granite Construction has laid down the conduits. And the "low lighting," being installed by Cate Electronics, will be placed no higher than eight feet from the ground, according to Jepson.

Merchants hope the lights will boost Carmel's slumping sales. The plan is to set the town aglow Dec. 4. The town will stay lighted until mid-January.

"We are doing the lights during the deadest time of year for Carmel," explained Jepson.

Senior leads effort to beautify CHS

An honor student and six-foot five-inch center for the CHS basketball team, Lindgren is spending his weekends landscaping at the high school; planting plum trees, ground cover, and installing a drip irrigation system to maintain an otherwise neglected area.

The project is slated for completion by Nov. 30. The Padre Parents Club paid for the supplies and fruit trees, according to Lindgren.

"The better the school looks, the more pride the faculty and the student body will have in their school," Lindgren noted.

Drought is still on, say officials

Peninsula Water Management District.

He differentiated drought as it relates to the needs of people, as drought in terms of the needs of the environment.

"The drought-based supply emergency is over because we have enough ground and surface water in the aquifers and reservoirs. But as far as the trees and the fish (in the Carmel River) are concerned, there is still as drought.

"From my definition as a hydrologist, last year was a drought year," he added.

The 1993 water year began Oct. 1. The month of October recorded three-quarters of an inch of rainfall, as measured at the San Clamente dam, noted Fuerst.

Normal rainfall for October is seven-tenths of an inch. Therefore, this year is a few drops over average.

The light October rains ended a not-unusual seven-month dry period that follows the close of the rainy season.

The big story, however, was water year 1992, which ended Sept. 30. It was essentially a normal rainfall year. The 20.26 inches recorded compared with the normal 20.37.

The rain filled up the district's water supply systems, allowing the water board to lift the water-supply emergency and discontinue the 10 percent voluntary rationing program.

Yet because the landscape was so dry as a result of the low-rainfall years — making for a "moisture deficit" — vital runoff last year was only 58 percent that of normal. Fuerst said the district was hoping for about 50,000 acre feet of runoff, but it only received 39,800.

Not surprising, Fuerst hopes water year 1993 will be above normal.

As for water supply itself, the district believes it has a one-year buffer. "If this year reverts to a drought-type year, we'll be okay this year, but next year we be on the edge of our seat," Fuerst said.

The key to managing water, explained Dale Hekhuis, president of the Monterey Peninsula Water Management Board, is to be conservative. "We are not basing (any of our planning) on the assumption we are out of the drought. We err on the side of caution."

Nevertheless, because the rains in water year 1992 filled up the aquifers and reservoirs, the district has more in storage now than it did at the same time last year.

Winter expected to be on the dry side, forecast says

WHILE THE peninsula can take some comfort in last year's respectable rainfall, the three-month forecast from the start of November is not promising.

"If the drought is like the recession, we must be coming out of it very slowly," said Robert Renard, who is the local volunteer observer with the National Weather Service.

The weather service's 90-day forecast for the Monterey Peninsula expects "near- to below-normal rainfall." Above normal rainfall, he said, is expected for the Rocky Mountains and east.

The forecast is based on sea surface temperatures, the jet stream and "the positions the pressure centers, the highs and lows," Renard explained.

Along with the low rainfall will be high temperatures, the forecast determined. The two phenomena, high temperatures and low rainfall, "don't necessarily go together...this doesn't mean it won't rain and it doesn't mean it won't get cold. This is just an average for the 90 days."

Renard said last year's very near normal rainfall, an aberration following five dry years, did not signal the end of a dry cycle.

The unpredictable

"I gave up predicting long ago," declared Jim Hughes, a director on the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District board. "I don't think we have to get all excited about this."

Hughes noted that the region lately has been receiving most of its rain in the spring. And as for the rain that fell in recent weeks, he remarked, "No one was expect That."

MPWMD General Manager Jim Cofer admitted you can't count on rain past February. "March is unpredictable," he observed.

While Hughes portrayed himself as somewhat of a skeptic about forecasts, Renard said the National Weather Service's three-month outlook carries with it a "65 percent credibility," if not better.

Local scouts earn civic duties badges

CUB SCOUT Den Four, Pack 127 of Carmel Valley visited the Monterey County Sheriff's Department this week, earning badges for civic duty.

Terry Melcher, the boys' den leader, arranged with Hicks to give the boys a tour of the sheriff's department. They visited the fingerprint room, crime lab, and two-way mirrored interrogation room. The most exciting event was a ride in Chatterton's patrol car as he persued a possible car thief with lights flashing and siren on.

The six scouts also watched a skit on how to say "no" to drugs, met Oscar the police dog, and were fingerprinted and given an indentification card before finally departing for the pizza parlor.

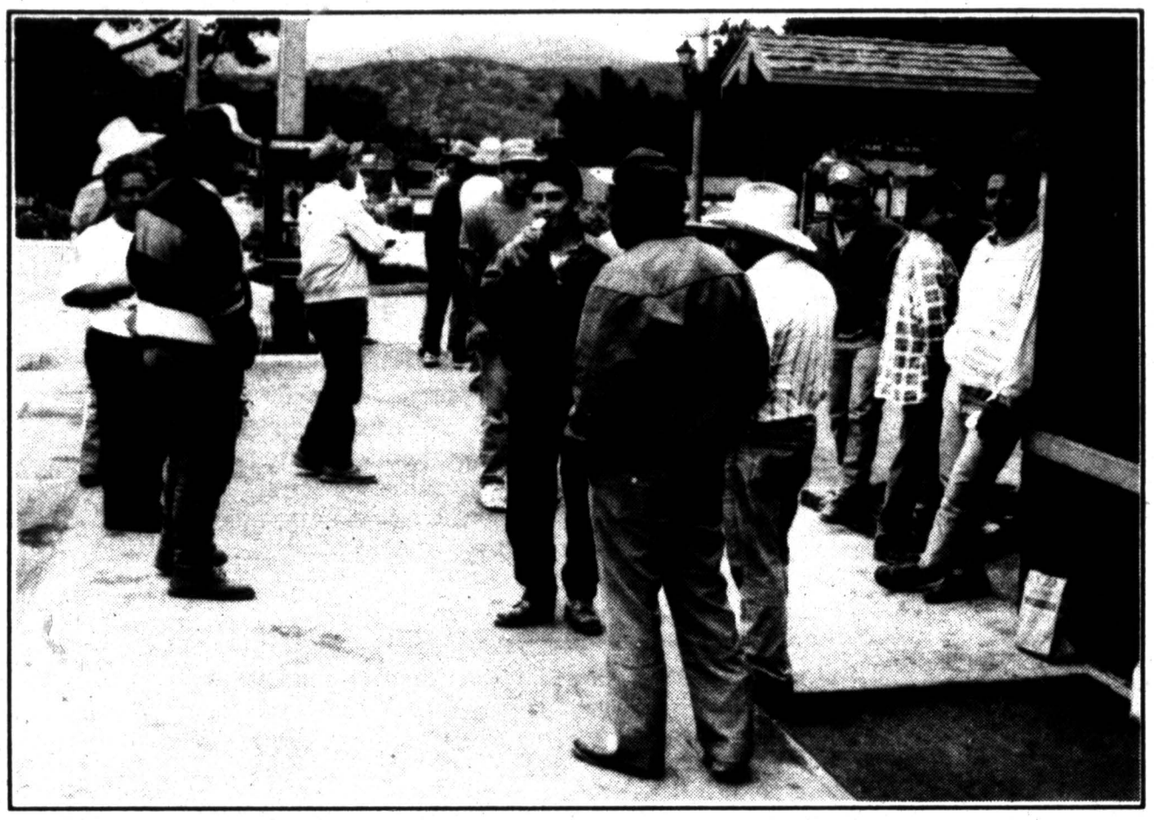
Carmel Valley Outlook



SOME OF these men may be among those arrested in the recent border patrol raid at Delfino Place in Carmel Valley Village. (Susan Beck photo)

Special Report

Recent immigration arrests likened to police state tactics

By SUSAN BECK

EARLY LAST Wednesday morning, 10 day-laborers were arrested by the U. S. Border Patrol in Carmel Valley Village.

Later that same morning, eight passengers riding the Monterey-Salinas Transit Route 9 bus were arrested, handcuffed and taken away by the border patrol.

A few weeks ago, a Monterey Peninsula resident was arrested by the border patrol while taking a child to school.

Also recently, a man was arrested in front of his place of work on the peninsula, handcuffed, and taken to a detention center, despite the fact that he had already provided legal documentation to the border patrol two weeks prior.

After the arrest, when he asked to make a telephone call, he was told, "You don't have any rights."

U. S. Rep. Leon Panetta has been concerned about these types of border patrol tactics for some time.

"Innocent people get caught up with those who are not documented," he said, speaking in a phone interview. "We encourage the Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS) not to go into public places and intimidate people. You must have probable cause, and I have asked the INS to give me a report of what happened on the bus."

RAMON HERNANDEZ

He added that the border patrol is supposed to handle its job with sensitivity. "They are looking for people with dark skin. You become suspect by the color of your skin. We have to be careful about this in a democratic society."

Allan Dwelley, an assistant chief patrol agent, said that four agents have been working on the Monterey Peninsula as a result of repeated complaints, especially from the Carmel Valley Village area. "We've had a lot of complaints about day-laborers, particularly at Delfino Place. We decided it was time to respond."

In defense of the border patrol's actions, he said that, under Sections 287 and 235 of the Immigration Nationality Act, agents have the authority to approach anyone without probable cause.

"We try to do our job as low-key as possible," he said. "We try to do the best we can. We have guidelines and regulations to work within, and as far as the recent arrests, nothing was done outside of those policies."

In response to the woman who was arrested while taking a child to school, he said, "I don't know what prompted them to talk with her." He added that agents often encounter situations where the child is a U. S. citizen, but the parents are not.

In this particular case, the women who was arrested was not the child's parent, but a friend of the parents. According to Dwelley, she did not offer any information about who the child was.

Apparently, when the woman did not return home, the child's parents called the Seaside Police Department. The border patrol received the report and was able to reunite the child with her parents, who are both here legally.

"This happens with some degree of regularity," said Dwelley. "Parents don't benefit from having a child who is a citizen until that child becomes 21 years old. At that time, the child can petition to legally immigrate the parents."

He said that normally the parents will choose to take the child back with them to their own country.

Village raids

The raid that occurred in Carmel Valley Village had been anticipated by Panetta because more people are gathering, not only on the peninsula, but in Salinas and Santa Cruz as well, in hopes of finding day jobs.

In the village, the men congregate everyday. Sometimes up to 60 day-laborers from Mexico, Central America and South America wait for a chance to work. These men are willing to work for low wages in the States because they typically earn $3 for eight hours of work in their own countries.

Local contractors, along with residents, hire these men readily and consistently to do day jobs.

There are some, however, who say the large gathering of men is intimidating and not good for business. So they have complained, and raids in Carmel Valley take place periodically.

In July, Panetta arranged a meeting of community members from Monterey, Santa Cruz and San Benito counties, who were either benefited or hurt by the day-laborers, to discuss the situation.

The meeting was in response to a request by the INS and Border Patrol Task Force to address the increasing numbers of day-laborers in all three counties.

Cachagua

Fees may create a de facto moratorium

By SUSAN BECK

CACHAGUA AND other outlying areas of the Carmel Valley Master Plan will be picking up the tab for improving Carmel Valley Road, said Ileene Crane-Franks, vice president of the Cachagua Area Property Owners Association.

On Aug. 25 the Monterey County Board of Supervisors adopted a nine month interim ordinance fee schedule to offset the cost of improving Carmel Valley Road.

The fee schedule applies to people not only within the Carmel Valley Master Plan area but, also those in the immediate areas outside the plan such as Cachagua.

Crane-Franks argues that Carmel Valley has an existing water moratorium that prohibits new water hook-ups except those already allocated.

Therefore, she said, the areas outside of the valley's master plan will bear the burden of paying for most of the improvements to Carmel Valley Road.

The additional fee for Cachagua is half that of those imposed to Carmel Valley building permits.

Cachagua moratorium

"It will cost an extra $2,550 out-of-pocket cost to build a house in Cachagua. In essence, it creates a de facto moratorium in Cachagua," said Crane-Franks.

She is also a real estate Broker in Carmel Valley, and believes that a moratorium in Cachagua will be caused because most construction loans require issuance of building permits prior to funding. "In some cases, property owners may not easily produce an extra $2,550."

The Carmel Valley Master Plan stipulates improving Carmel Valley Road when the "traffic trigger" is pulled, which has happened. The purpose of the interim ordinance is to allow development projects already in process a way to proceed while the county determines what to do about the traffic problem.

The Cachagua Area Plan and the greater Monterey Peninsula Area Plan do not contain policies requiring a moratorium because of traffic, said Crane-Franks. "It is unnecessary and unjust to include outlying areas in the interim ordinance."

That's just part of the ordinances' problems. After researching California's Government Code, she found that the collection of development fees should be deferred for a residential project until a certificate of occupancy is issued, or on the date of final inspection, whichever happens first.

This finding contradicts the interim ordinances' imposed fee collection when a building permit is issued. She said, "It seems our state legislature did not intend a fee of this nature to burden residential development at the outset."

In addition, Crane-Franks pointed out that the difference in cost between the adopted ordinance and another one presented by county's public works, which covers only the Carmel Valley Master Plan area, is $50 to $100 for lots of record and $200 for future lots.

"The difference is negligible," she said. "It makes no sense to apply this fee schedule to areas outlying the Carmel Valley Mater Plan."

Funding options

Also, she pointed out that the Carmel Valley Master Plan identifies Carmel Valley Road as a principal arterial road. Because of this, west Carmel Valley Road between Carmel Rancho Boulevard and Highway One is included in the Congestion Management Plan for Monterey County, which the state and federal governments fund.

She suggest that state and federal funds may be eligible for volume-related road improvements with the Congestion Management Plan if areas adjacent to and outlying the master plan are also included in county's public works Area Benefit Map.

Crane-Franks thinks another funding solution appropriate for the improvements to Carmel Valley Road is a tax on gasoline sales. She said that seventeen counties in California now charge a transportation tax, which is part of their sales tax.

She added that no county currently charges a tax on gasoline sales, adding that there is no current legislation existing to allow or prohibit counties from levying a true gas tax.

"I suggest the board of supervisors demonstrate its leadership to work with state representatives to obtain legislation allowing counties to levy a true gas tax for funding of county transportation projects."

Border patrol raids

Panetta's immediate goal is to provide appropriate centers for the workers, and he has asked each county's board of supervisors to do a better job in working toward that goal. A meeting of the Immigration Task Force will be held Wednesday, Nov. 18 in Seaside to discuss the matter further.

William Melendez, past state director of the League of United Latin American Citizens (LULAC) was also present at the July meeting. He is working with Panetta to provide centers for the day-laborers.

He said the recent raids are bizarre and unqualified Gestapo techniques. "We do not live in a police state."

They have to be viewed at the humane level, said Melendez. "Not everyone is in good health. What happens if some innocent person has a heart attack during a raid. That's the frightening part."

He added that the border patrol is acting like a quasi-military organization with police powers. He disagrees with the interpretation that probable cause is not necessary. "Any law enforcement official must have probable cause to ask questions. You can't just come up to me and ask for papers. Who the hell gives them the authority to ask anyone about their legal status?"

Melendez said that he has heard reports about a number of people with legal documentation who are afraid to come out of their homes because of the recent raids.

A local social worker told him that prenatal patients are cancelling their appointments. He also questions the political aspect to the raids. "Were people afraid to vote because they feared being intimidated at the voting booth?"

Ramon Hernandez has lived on the Monterey Peninsula since 1983, and has worked in the same restaurant for nine years. He has his legal papers in order and does not have to be concerned about the border patrol. But, he is.

He agrees with Melendez's political speculation.

"In 1988 we had the same type of raids. It was an election year," said Hernandez. "Even people with papers were afraid to go out to vote because they might be harassed."

He added that the Seaside area has been particularly targeted. "A lot of guys are paying their friends for rides to work instead of taking the bus."

Monday, Melendez held a meeting under the umbrella of the LULAC Committee on Immigrant Refugee Rights. Several people attended, including representatives of the California Rural Legal Assistance, immigration attorney, Phyllis Davies, and Bill Monning, executive director of the Regional Alliance for Progressive Policy, attorney, and recent recipient of the Ralph Atkinson Award.

"We are going to put our heads together and look at the larger picture. This has set our community back 10 years. Any citizen could be placed in jeopardy, and someone is going to be hurt. We should know who the border patrol is, and what to do if they come to our door."

Carmel Valley Road

Supes agree to safety improvements

By SUSAN BECK

THE MONTEREY County Board of Supervisors unanimously approved an Environmental Impact Report (EIR) on Carmel Valley Road Nov. 3.

The two-year issue of improving Carmel Valley Road was the cause for continued debate as to just how much was needed to once again provide an acceptable level of traffic service along the road.

"It was very clear from the EIR that four-laning Carmel Valley Road would have major consequences," said Karin Strasser Kauffman, chair of the board of supervisors.

"The question once and for all," said added, "is that four-laning is not appropriate. The buildout that was envisioned in the Carmel Valley Master Plan will not likely materialize. We have more information, and the safety improvements required now will be less ambitious than what was originally projected."

The board's decision is the recognition of support for something less obtrusive, said Strasser Kauffman.

"Passing lanes instead of three or four-laning is a big step forward. The decision observes the policy in the Carmel Valley Master Plan that calls for keeping Carmel Valley Road's rural atmosphere preserved."

She also applauded the public testimony at the hearing.

"It was one of the most professional groups of speakers that I've ever heard since I've been on the board. The community was exemplary in its participation."

The improvements will be from Via Petra to Robinson Canyon Road. Some of the changes will include passing lanes, raised medians, two-way left turn lanes, and a bicycle lane.

The County staff was directed to develop a formal project proposal including cost estimates.

Rankings galore

ANYBODY BESIDES the PR staff at Pebble see that the Inn and Links at Spanish Bay was rated No. 4 by the readers of Conde Nast in its recent Top 100 poll?

About the same time readers of Harper's Hideaway Report ranked Ventana as their No. 4 favorite resort. The Lodge at Pebble Beach was voted No. 12 and Spanish Bay was nowhere in sight in the Harpers survey.

Incidentally, the Lodge at Pebble Beach raked just 31st on the Conde Nast Top 100 poll. Carmel Valley Ranch (yes) came in at No. 90.

Golf packages

As the calendar year moves toward its close, golf treats, in the form of attractive packages, are still being offered by various resorts and tour agencies.

Among the leaders:

La Quinta Hotel Golf & Tennis Resort — This always reliable resort is offering a package that includes play on one of the Pete Dye courses, "casita-style" accommodations, advance tee time, range balls, transportation to and from the courses, golf cart and club storage.

Double occupancy rates are $182.50 midweek, and $192.50 weekends per person. Single occupancy rates also available. For information call (800) 472-4316.

Wide World of Golf — Officed in Carmel, Wide World of Golf is offering what it calls "Special Edition Itineraries," which includes a Seabourn Cruise to Mexico in December, Southeast Asia in February and an exclusive barge cruise in France next fall. For information on these and other tours call 624-6667.

Sandy Lane Hotel & Golf Club — This St. James, Barbados resort is featuring unlimited free golf as part of its "Classic Golf Vacation," good through Dec. 18. Rates starts at $1,060 for four-days, three nights and in addition to accommodations the package includes golf clinics and lessons, cart or caddy for all rounds — even left-handed club rental.

For information about Sandy Lane call (800) 225-5843.

New Year's Eve

Yep. First word out on New Year's Eve plans comes from the Ritz-Carlton in San Francisco. Highlight, in our opinion, of their year-ending bash is the black tie optional dinner dance and the Zasu Pitts Memorial Orchestra. The orchestra changes personnel from year to year, but it's always a blast. And at the Ritz, too.

Of course, there is always dinner on the romance side in The Dining Room. Chef Gary Danko will be preparing a five-course dinner, which will be five-star in our book.

Kimco's boutique hotels in San Francisco have various special rates in effect. Check out the Galleria Park Hotel, (800) 792-9639, or Hotel Vintage Court, (800) 655-1100, for more information. Both hotels are near Union Square, which makes for convenient shopping.

Doris Day's Best Friends

By Doris Day

Another happy ending

WE ALL know Marlee Matlin from her stunning, Oscar-winning performance in "Children of a Lesser God," and recently we've had the added pleasure of enjoying her talent in a weekly television series, "Reasonable Doubts," in which she stars with Mark Harmon.

MARLEE AND HANNAH

Since I have so much admiration for her acting ability and her involvement in a number of children's charities, I was absolutely thrilled when Susan Dubow, a friend of Marlee's, called our pet foundation a few weeks ago. We learned that Marlee is a great animal lover too, and her friends wanted to surprise her on her 27th birthday with a dog.

We usually refrain from placing pets as "gifts" unless the prospective owner is part of the matchmaking process. However, Susan knew that the time was right because Marlee was moving into a new home and was eager to have a four-legged Best Friend to love. After speaking with Susan and learning about Marlee's lifestyle and what type of dog she would enjoy, we thought immediately about "Hannah." Hannah is one-half of a fabulous sister team that I had difficulty placing here in Carmel. She and Anna are "Dreyfuss" look-alikes – beautiful St. Bernard mixes, young, sweet, and BIG! They were cared for in L.A. by Carol Teall, one of our terrific foster parents, and Anna was soon placed in a wonderful home. Hannah was still waiting and Carol was sure she would be perfect for Marlee.

So, early on the morning of the Big Day, Carol took Hannah to be groomed and then they were off to surprise Marlee. They arrived early and as they approached the front door, Marlee's friends opened it and motioned Carol and Hannah inside. Carol took Hannah off her leash and she eagerly greeted that roomful of new friends, bouncing and wiggling and giving lots of wet, slurpy kisses. After a few moments Marlee came from the back of the house. Hannah saw her and all 75 pounds of her went bounding down the hallway to greet her new mom. Marlee paused for a second and with a huge smile on her face asked, "Who's this?" When her friends told her Hannah was her birthday gift she was beside herself with joy and she got right down on the floor with Hannah. Carol says it was hard to know who was more excited – the two-legger or the four-legger! Marlee kept saying, "I'm thrilled, I love her," and that's when Carol knew this was the perfect match.

We've heard that all is going very well. Hannah goes everywhere with Marlee, even out to eat. You see, Marlee often chooses outdoor cafes so Hannah can go with her! I'm thrilled for Hannah and couldn't have wished for a happier ending to her story than this very wonderful Best Friend named Marlee Matlin.

"I traded a house full of rooms for a life full of friends"

The decision to move was a difficult one, but I was tired of cooking and cleaning and quite honestly ... being alone.

Valley Heights was a natural choice for me. As I started exploring my options and talking to people in the community, I discovered that I already knew several residents. They were very happy with the services and the quality of life at Valley Heights.

The owners, Richard Murphy and Kelly Chilcote, have operated Valley Convalescent Hospital for the last thirty years. As personal friends of mine I know the level of commitment they feel toward their residents.

I have discovered a whole new life. Free of the everyday chores, I am now using the extra time to attend exercise classes, book reviews and seminars. I have enjoyed making new friends and the challenge of living in an active and stimulating environment.

Yes, the decision was difficult but now the living is easy!

Get on board

CALIFORNIA WAS born in Monterey, at Colton Hall, on Oct. 13, 1849, when Constitutional Convention delegates put their signatures to the document demanding that California, the Bear Flag Republic, be admitted to the Union.

The preceding year Water Colton, alcalde of Monterey, described his feelings at the completion of Colton Hall, the oldest American public building in California, and in 1848, the most important edifice on the central coast.

"I leave it as humble evidence of what may be accomplished by rigidly adhering to one purpose, and shrinking from no personal efforts necessary to its achievement," he wrote in his journal.

Walter Colton's inspiring words of commitment still ring true as a new museum emerges, due to the efforts of citizens striving to unify the rich cultural heritage of our community.

Not far from Colton Hall, overlooking the waterfront, is the Maritime Museum of Monterey, located at historic Custom House Plaza. The museum, which celebrated its grand opening this past week, is the culmination of many years of effort by individuals and organizations in the community, among them the late Allen Knight, devoted collector of maritime artifacts; Rear Admiral Earl E. Stone; philanthropist Virginia Stanton and Gordon Paul Smith, president of the Monterey History and Art Association.

Monterey's vital link to the sea is evident throughout the 18,000-square-foot colonial adobe building. Artifacts from the Allen Knight Maritime Collection including 55,000 negatives of historic sailing vessels, the most complete set of Lloyd's Registers on the West Coast; a 6-foot-long model of John Drake Sloat's ship, Savannah; priceless navigational instruments and the historic Fresnel First Order 4,000-pound lens from Point Sur Lighthouse are on permanent display and available for research study.

The building also houses a 100-seat theater, gift shop managed by one of Allen Knight's daughters, research library and visitor orientation center, where information on Monterey's historic adobes is available.

SCOOPLETTES

Maritime Museum Executive Director Donna Penwell reports the volunteer base of the Monterey History and Art Association, the group responsible for overseeing the new facility, has grown from 120 to 350. Volunteers are still needed.

"We only require four hours a month," Penwell said recently, to persuade new people to "get on board." Penwell refers to Maritime Museum volunteers as "watch-standers" and urges interested parties to call 373-AHOY for information.

Virginia Stanton not only donated the funds to build the new Stanton History Center to house the Allen

Knight Maritime Collection, but also solicited donations. Penwell, again, "Virginia would drive up to the front door and say, "I have something in my car for you, Donna.' I never knew what I would find; an out of this world scrimshaw collection, a first edition of Moby Dick. I think Virginia has enjoyed this project from start to finish."

The City of Monterey donated the site of the new Maritime Museum with one provision. Leave room in the lobby for a backhoe. The main water and sewer lines for the city run right through the center of the site so the entry has to be designed to be accessible to workmen if there is ever a leak. The doors are constructed to open in three panels, the floor is bricks, set in sand. "God, I hope it never happens," Penwell said, looking at the brand new lobby.

When she asked Sicilian families to donate fishing artifacts to the Maritime Museum they said, "What do you want that junk for? Baskets, nets, needles and photographs, all part of Monterey's maritime heritage, now tell the Sicilian part of the tale.

Who is going to use the Maritime Museum? Visitors? Locals? Maritime scholars? Critics may say its passive nature as a maritime repository will only sustain the one-time visitor or serious sea-going buff. Supporters will point out the undeniable benefits to Monterey. The Maritime Museum will entice the aquarium crowd into the historic districts of Monterey, to learn about this area's rich past. But does the new facility hold long-term appeal for residents? Can it take the place of a performing arts center?

Batten down the hatches, mates, there may be a storm brewin'.

Council approves fund-raisers to purchase wildland fire rig

THE CARMEL City Council approved a pair of additional fund-raisers to help the fire department purchase a coveted wildland fire rig.

In a kind of Deal of the Century, the department has been renting a diminutive, agile wildland fire engine for a token $80 a month from the State Department of Forestry and Fire Protection. Officials hope to buy the rig for between $5,000 and $6,000 next month.

On Sunday, Nov. 1, the department held a barbecue at Devendorf park that raised roughly $1,000. It now plans a dance for Dec. 5 and a tee-shirt sale thereafter.

"We are definitely doing this series of fund-raisers," said Art Black, CFD fire prevention specialist. "We'd like to have it and we are going to buy it."

No absolutes

Yet Black noted there are no absolute certainties in the department's situation. The CFD must, in effect, bid for the engine. Yet it is not expected other agencies will try to elbow the department out of its ambitions.

In recent weeks, the department has practiced with the vintage 1976 "Class 3" engine, which officials describe as old but not antiquated. It is the kind of vehicle that can be driven on dirt roads. It cannot pump as many gallons per minute, but it can pump while in motion.

With such greenbelts as Mission Trails Park and Pescadero Canyon at stake, the rig is quite an asset, officials have explained.

Black promises that, when the details of the fund-raisers are finalized, "there will be profuse advance publicity." No city dollars have been assigned to either the rental or purchase of the engine.

Father Farrell's Wisdom

'Gracias a Dios'

WHEN I was a young lad growing up near Tortilla Flat in Monterey, one of the first expressions I learned in Spanish was, "Gracias a Dios"—Thanks be to God.

To the paisanos of the Monterey Peninsula this praise was automatic, spontaneous and deeply felt. It was used in good times and in bad, in sickness and in health, in sunshine and in rain, in life and in death.

I remember greeting Juanito, an old man crippled with arthritis and almost blind. "Como estas, Juanito?" "Muy bien, Huerito, gracias a Dios."

One of the worst words in Spanish is "ingrato or desgradeato," an ingrate, a person who is ungrateful to God and to man.

Oh Lord, we promise that we shall continue the traditions of this peninsula not only on "el ultimo jueves do Noviembre" but on every day of the year and the words of old Monterey will be ever on our lips and in our hearts "Gracias a Dios."

Recently, two of our Rotary yachtmen were caught in a heavy fog, high seas and fifty knot winds off Point Lobos. The captain, consulting his chart and compass, turned to his companion and said, "Take off your cap. I have just figured we are in the center aisle of Carmel Mission Basilica." Thank God it isn't the bar at the Mission Ranch. Amen.

Bach Fest makes known significant changes

By JOHN DETRO

HUMOR AND audience involvement emerge today as sturdy components of next year's Carmel Bach Festival — along with a Saturday night commencement.

And there will be no full opera.

These touches stand among significant changes made known by the festival board and Executive Director Nana Faridany.

Their written announcement makes clear that Maestro Bruno Weil, music director and conductor, already has put a deeply personal stamp on his upcoming second season with the 56-year-old annual event.

"Maestro Weil believes that the festival needs a touch of humor," says the document released by Faridany, "so he has engaged Donald Pippin of San Francisco's Pocket Opera to present a light-hearted evening of serious music with not-so-serious translations — Bach's Coffee Cantata and Mozart's Bastien und Bastienne — in a semi-staged format with narration."

And: "David Gordon and Daniel Lichti will participate in this concert which will provide a dramatic element in place of the complete staged opera of many past seasons. Maestro Weil believes that staging an opera at Sunset Theater, with its limited facilities, deflects the festival resources and energies away from the principal purpose of producing excellence in musical performance."

The process

In order to involve audiences "in the process of making music come alive," the announcement continues, "Bruno Weil will have a series of open rehearsals called Birth of a Performance...(H)e will wear a microphone while he takes the orchestra from first reading to dress rehearsal of a major work."

Additionally, the maestro "thinks it more festive to begin on a Saturday night" so the festival will open Saturday, July 17, 1993, and run through Aug. 8. "There will be the usual three full series of concerts, but the new format will allow two extra weekend performance days. One option to be considered by the board is a full Saturday night performance in Salinas at Sherwood Hall of Haydn's The Seasons."

Other points brought forth by the lengthy statement:

• Maestro Weil's plans for the program include "a Saturday all-Bach opening concert: Cantatas 208 and 80, the C Major Orchestral Suite and the D Minor Violin Concerto with Elizabeth Wallfisch, new concertmaster of the festival orchestra, as soloist."

• "Miss Wallfisch is the leader of the Orchestra of the Age of Enlightenment in England where she played with Maestro Weil at the Glyndebourne Festival Opera. She is a specialist in both modern and Baroque violins with many CDs to her credit, and will teach a strings master class in 18th century performance practice on modern instruments."

Soloists returning

• "Sunday, Maestro Weil will conduct Bach's Passion According to St. Matthew with three soloists returning from 1992: David Gordon (Evangelist), Maria Venuti

Art scene fairly sizzles with activity

By JOHN DETRO

CARMEL'S CARL Cherry Center for the Arts makes a statement today that's well worth making and hearing.

"The surge of crafts production on the West Coast since the 1970s has left a permanent mark on our aesthetic sensibilities," Center Director Robert Reese comments.

"Ceramic sculpture, fiber art, wood, metals and woven media have brought something new to the discourse of contemporary art. In recognition of this maturation, we will present a selection of fine crafts to be exhibited and sold in November."

The public is invited to an opening reception from 2:30-4:30 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 7. Folk artists Judy and Bruce Cowan will perform an eclectic musical mix from around the world. Additional sale day: Nov. 28 from noon until 4 p.m.

The juried show gives a representative sprawl of talent from all over the peninsula as well as a calligraphy exhibit by the Sea Scribes.

Gathered are ceramic pieces by Randy Weber (Marina), Ania Malkowska (Carmel Valley), Mary Murray and Linda Christy (Carmel), Karen Gelff (Pacific Grove).

In addition, the Cherry Galleries will feature jewelry by Jim Casteel (Big Sur), yucca walking sticks by Julia Masaoka (Carmel Valley), watercolor and dye paintings on silk by Evelyn Jenkins (Aptos).

A portion of proceeds will help support exhibits and programs of non-profit Cherry Center, at Fourth and Guadalupe.

McCandless pieces

HIGHLANDS SCULPTURE Gallery (on Dolores between Fifth and Sixth in Carmel) will feature the oak, bronze and aluminum pieces of California artist Jean Birkland McCandless from Nov. 6 through Dec. 6.

A public reception with the artist present will be held there from 4-7 p.m. on Friday, Nov. 13.

Center development

A PHOTO exhibition of the internationally-praised Don Worth will be on view Nov. 6-Dec. 18 at Center for Photographic Art in the Sunset Complex.

And an opening reception will be held from 6:30 until 8 p.m. on Friday, Nov. 6. The public's invited.

Like several other well-known photographers, Worth was pursuing a career in music when he began using the camera seriously. In the 1950s he gave up performing, teaching and composing to start his photographic career as an assistant to Ansel Adams.

His subject matter ranges from serene landscapes and still-lifes to nudes and plant studies. One inspirational source — 17th century Dutch still-life painting.

Worth will present a one-day workshop from 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. on Saturday, Nov. 7. Additional details: 625-5181.

ITS ANNUAL concert of barbershop harmony will be staged at Sunset Theater on Saturday night, Nov. 7, by the Monterey Chapter of the Society for the Preservation and Encouragement of Barbershop Quartet Singing in America, Inc.

Besides the Cypressaires Chorus and local quartets, the show will feature two other groups — Pastense ("four wacky ladies from Sacramento") and Sound Projection ("popular comedy quartet out of Hanford"). Actress Maura Leos "will help tie the program together," producers say.

Cypressaires hail from all over the Monterey Peninsula as well as Watsonville, Marina, Salinas. They gather once a week to enjoy singing in the barbershop style and prepare for performances and competitions.

They help raise funds for the Institute of Logopedics, Kansas center for correcting language handicaps.

Secrets of existence pursued

A PAIR of presentations which bear upon open secrets of existence will unfold hereabouts and very shortly.

• Artist and minister Scott Foglesong will offer a multi-media inspirational talk — Walk This Way — at 7 p.m. Monday, Nov. 9, at the Whole Life Center of Thunderbird Bookshop in The Barnyard.

• A symposium into the parallels between 20th century physics and religious world views will be held Friday evening, Nov. 6, in Lecture Forum 102 of Monterey Peninsula College.

Foglesong has been dubbed "a man for all seasons." The 45-year-old assistant minister with Pacific Coast Church calls his lectures "an opportunity for people to come together and experience themselves, to feel good about who they are."

Images of nature (stars, wilderness, flowers) are interspersed with Native American historical slides and earth sounds. Foglesong's life story unfolds, reflecting the ways of Indians.

Born in Iowa, Foglesong contracted polio at age seven. His parents took him to a Colorado ranch for a summer vacation. There he met Frank Wright.

"Frank swept me off the ground and put me on a horse that had to be the size of a small tree," Foglesong says. "There was something magic about him; it was like a kindred spirit reunion."

Wright gave the youngster a love of nature and the Native American sensibility. Today, Foglesong uses Medicine Cards as part of his shows. Program notes say that, through animal totem symbols, "he can relate to a participant that which is pertinent to the particular life path."

Don't see yourself as being apart, Foglesong advises. "Love, nurture, give. And then observe what goes on around you. This brings messages about how you feel regarding who you are."

Donation At the door: $5 per person.

TITLE OF the MPC event: Quarks, Koans and the Quantum Field. It's sponsored by Carmel's Carl Cherry Center for the Arts, Monterey Bay Zen Center and MPC Humanities Department.

"The panel," according to an announcement, "will explore the accelerated meeting between Christianity, Buddhism and the discoveries in modern physics during the past 40 years. The strong links between physics and mysticism have shown that the constituents of matter are interconnected and can be understood only as integral parts of a unified whole — not as isolated entities."

Beginning at 7:30 p.m., these panelists will explicate the notion of Quantum Interconnectedness and space/time as it meets the tenets of Buddhism and modern Christianity:

• Dr. Bruce Weaver, writer, lecturer. Senior astronomer and president at Monterey Institute for Research in Astronomy.

• Tenshin Reb Anderson. Made a Dharma lineage holder (1983) and abbot of San Francisco Zen Center (1986). He leads retreats all over this nation and Europe.

• Fr. Charlie Moore, Roman Catholic priest and Celtic scholar. He has led Pacific Grove's Gathering of the Way since 1972.

• Kai Woehler, chairman for the Naval Postgraduate School Physics Department. Areas of specialization include astrophysics, cosmology, quantum theory.

• Brother David Steindl-Rast. An author and member of the Benedictine Order, he has been active in bringing contemplatives from the great religions together.

Tickets cost $7 apiece. Reservations may be made by calling Cherry Center (624-7491).

Pianist Benedetto Lupo confirms abilities

By NATHALIE PLOTKIN

PIANIST BENEDETTO Lupo opened the new season of the Keyboard Artist Series Sunday afternoon in Carmel's Sunset Theater and in the course of the concert, strongly reminded me of the fine impression he made when he appeared here under the same auspices in February of 1991.

As before, there was no doubt about his abilities from the very beginning.

He is a quietly confident performer who has much to be assured about. The four short works which make up the Vier Klavierstucke Op. 119 by Johannes Brahms were no mere hand warmers for Lupo. These were offered with poetic awareness and high musical finesse.

The close

With this opus, Brahms reached the close of his development as a composer for the piano, and this final flowering is a collection of small gems of the literature.

The Intermezzo No. 1 in B Minor was a delicately sighing, exquisite musical watercolor picture, a simile which occurred to me many times during the program.

The Intermezzo No. 2 in E Minor had an elusive quality which became a romantic swaying waltz full of carefully realized, graduated dynamics.

The Intermezzo No. 3 in C Major was majestic and was essayed with controlled, well proportioned power.

Lupo's refined sensibilities and great empathy with Brahmsian romanticism was fully in evidence.

Similar attitude

The Schumann Sonata No. 2 in G Minor Op. 22, though composed some 50 years prior to the Vier Klavierstucke, found the artist relying on a similar pianistic approach and attitude. There were the same type of exquisitely graduated dynamics, beautifully crafted phrasings and sensitive interpretive understanding.

Though Lupo's technique is flawless, his attack on the sonata's stormy first theme was overly reticent and controlled. As he went on he seemed to become more involved, playing with less reserve and more intensity and making the requisite quick silver mood changes subtly and flexibly.

The Andante sang with longing expressiveness and the Scherzo was spirited and capricious. The Finale contrasted power and introspective delicacy. The playing sparkled.

Refinement noted

La plus que lente and Images Book II by Claude Debussy were performed with refinement and elegance. Lupo created more than one hushed and murmuring ambiance.

There were drifting mists and pastel shades of ethereal dynamics. It was fine pianism all the way.

The Bartok Sonata (1926) was not the percussive and driving contrast to the Debussian watercoloring that I expected. Lupo's interpretation was overly civilized for all its strength and emphasis. The rhythm and harmonic language were painted with vivid colors and much vigor, but the excitement was kept reined in.

The Second Movement echoed Debussy in its pianistic style and a jocular outburst marked the Third Movement. There was power enough to convince one of the pianist's technical accomplishments. The rhythmic drive and a warmer approach brought the work to a thundering conclusion.

Lupo's encores showed that he could loosen up and be spontaneous.

We heard a Prelude by Nino Rota, a magnificent Liebestod from Tristan and Isolde in the Liszt transcription and a resounding Masque from Romeo and Juliet by Prokofief.

Jazz Tides

By John Detro

Biff's Muse on the move

THE MAIL brought a real treat — first CD by local jazz pianist and composer Biff Smith. All 11 tunes flowed from his pen and so the package carries a straightforward and appropriate title: Jazz Originals.

Biff (see above) teaches English and music at Robert Louis Stevenson School. Summers, he's an assistant professor of music at Boston's Berklee College. Known hereabouts for his wit and keyboard crispness, Smith got together excellent players in the studio — Larry Schneider (alto and tenor saxes), himself on piano, Terry Miller (electric bass), Eddie Marshall (drums).

Biff likes and writes beautiful melodies with sometimes wry harmonic turns. He fuses advanced theory with the sheer joy of performance. This CD will please longtime jazz buffs along with acolytes — not a bad gift choice with the holidays looming just ahead.

He's arranging distribution as quickly as possible. So far the bright item may be obtained at Do Re Mi Music and Lighthouse Records.

Smith's liner notes name many musicians with whom he has played here at home and elsewhere. Generous touch. Good guy.

BLUES GUITARIST Leonard Paschini and poet Pat Nolan will get together for a blend of music and words at Pacific Grove's Portofino Cafe on Saturday night, Nov. 7. Starts at 8 p.m. Door charge of $5 per.

THE JAZZ series put together by musician Nick Williams and Carmel Recreation Department continues on Thursday night, Nov. 5, at the Lumber Room in Vista Lobos Park (on Third between Junipero and Torres). Kicks off at 7 p.m.

The modest and optional door charge covers refreshments. Info: 626-9151.

Funtime notebook: library talk

THE PURSUIT of crime is paying off handsomely for Harrison Memorial Library in Carmel, where its Authors-by-the-Sea series is providing funds for the purchase of new books.

So far, over $7,000 has been raised, thanks to the generosity of world-famous mystery authors who donate their time to appear in the library's cozy reading room and discuss what it's like to write about murder and mayhem.

(And thanks to Holiday House of Carmel, and to various Carmel restaurants, the writers have a place to sleep and dine while they are here.) Gerald Petievich, former Secret Service agent and current author of such superthrillers as To Live and Die in L.A., Paramour, To Die in Beverly Hills, Shakedown and Money Men/One Shot Deal, will appear at the library Friday evening, Nov. 6, at 8 p.m. Tickets at $12 each are available at the library's circulation desk.

There is no reserved seating and only a limited number of tickets will be sold. Refreshments prepared by the library staff will be available.

LOCAL ACTOR Taelen Thomas will join forces with singer and recording artist Larry Hosford in a dramatic/musical show based on the careers of three California bandits — Joaquin Murietta, Monterey's Tiburcio Vasquez and Black Bart.

They'll work out on Friday, Nov. 6, at the Portofino Cafe in Pacific Grove. It all starts at 8 p.m.

"Songs and stories," says Thomas, "will be presented against a background of historical accuracy."

Thomas will play highwayman Black Bart while Hosford will portray Sheriff Harry Morse, who chased Vasquez for 61 days and didn't catch him. Morse later came to know Black Bart quite well.

EXPLORING THE AQUARIUM

It's state-of-the-art, affording an up-close and personal view of some 525 species of fishes, mammals, birds, invertebrates and plants found in Monterey Bay.

The Monterey Bay Aquarium, constructed "in the footprint" of the Hovden Cannery on the west end of Cannery Row — opening to the public in October 1984. A $50 million gift from David and Lucile Packard of Silicon Valley fame made into reality the conversion of a former cannery site into a celebration of colorful and complex Monterey Bay marine life, from sharks to brittlestars to sea otters.

Open 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. daily except Christmas, the Monterey Bay Aquaiurm houses 23 major indoor and outdoor galleries and exhibits focusing on the many habitats of Monterey Bay. The aquarium is now a self-supporting non-profit entity.

Rooflines and even lighting fixtures echo the original Cannery Row style documented by John Steinbeck in his 1945 novel of the same nave. Visitors entering the aquarium walk past the original Hovden Cannery boilers, pumphouse and warehouse. These were virtually the only features that could be salvaged from the structure. The rest of the aquarium is new and strictly high-tech. Its 33 major exhibit windows, manufactured by Mitsubishi Rayon of Japan, include panels that are seven and one quarter inches thick and weight 2.73 tons each. Two 16-inch diameter, 980-foot-long intake lines draw up to 2,050 gallons of sea water per minute from a depth of 55 feet in Monterey Bay. The seawater system permits varing levels of filtration — depending on the needs of the 6,500 specimens that live in the aquarium. These levels range from raw seawater to pressure-sand filtered, deembolyzed seawater.

And then there are the animals. The Monterey Bay Aquarium is a place where visitors can gaze up into the cathedral-like branches of a kelp forest as a diver explains its intricacies from the other side of a seven-inch-thick window, stare eye-to-eye with a tank's worth of frisky sea otters and brave petting a bat ray that has no stinger.

Virtually all of its inhabitants can be found in Monterey Bay.

Also described by many as "a gawker," the third-of-a-million gallon Kelp Forest exhibit presents a diver's-eye view of a complex undersea community. The exhibit can be viewed from three levels within the aquarium, and houses a towering forest of Macrocystis pyrifera, the California coastline's giant kelp. Jets hidden in the rockwork walls and a surge machine maintain the constant water motion kelp requires. This seaweed, which locally grows up to 10 inches a day, forms a canopy open to the sunlight at the surface.

Also in the "gawker" category is the Monterey Bay Habitats exhibit, a 90-foot-long, hourglass-shaped tank that depicts four bay habitats: the deep reefs, sandy seafloor, shale reefs and the wharf. Large sharks, bat rays, salmon, striped bass and other open-ocean fishes roam the Monterey Bay exhibit.

Viewers have a choice to observe the goings-on through bubble-shaped windows or a series of massive acrylic panes.

An interlocking series of habitat galleries and interpretive exhibits explores the facts, myths and mysteries of marine life in the region. Here the curious may study an elegant chambered nautilus hovering in mid-water, sleek and speedy squid, the giant octopus, hermit crabs, and dollars and dozens of other oceanic denizens.

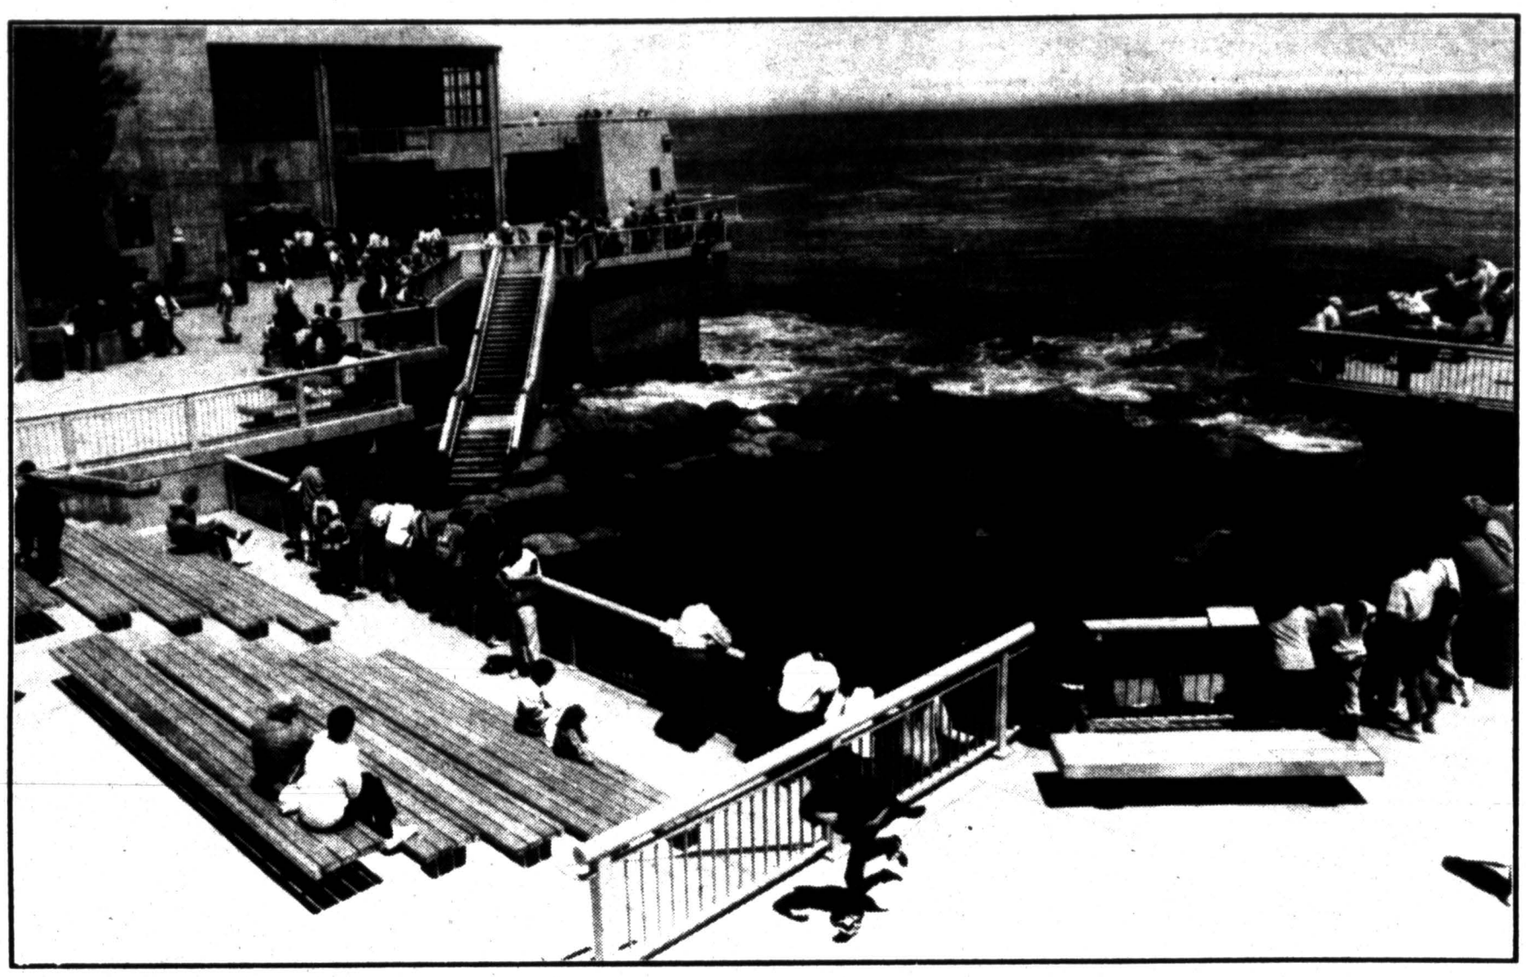
The Monterey Bay Aquarium operates many programs, including research and education. Approximately 100,000 person are members, entitling them to unlimited admission, a newsletter, special programs and other benefits. For details, call (408) 648-4888.

The Monterey Bay Aquarium is located at 886 Cannery Row on its west end, between the borders of Monterey and Pacific Grove. Admission is $9.75 general, $7.25 for students, active-duty military and senior citizens (65 and over), $4.50 for children ages 3 through 12. Group rates for 20 or more are available by reservation. Call (408) 648-4860, between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. Monday through Friday. Tickets can also be pre-ordered through Ticketron outlets. There are no Ticketron outlets on the Monterey Peninsula, however.

All exhibits are wheelchair-accessible.

For recorded information about the aquarium, call (408) 648-4888.

For the convenience of aquarium visitors who have their own cars, parking is available at the Cannery Row Parking Garage. Rates are $1.00 per hour, up to $8.000 maximum!

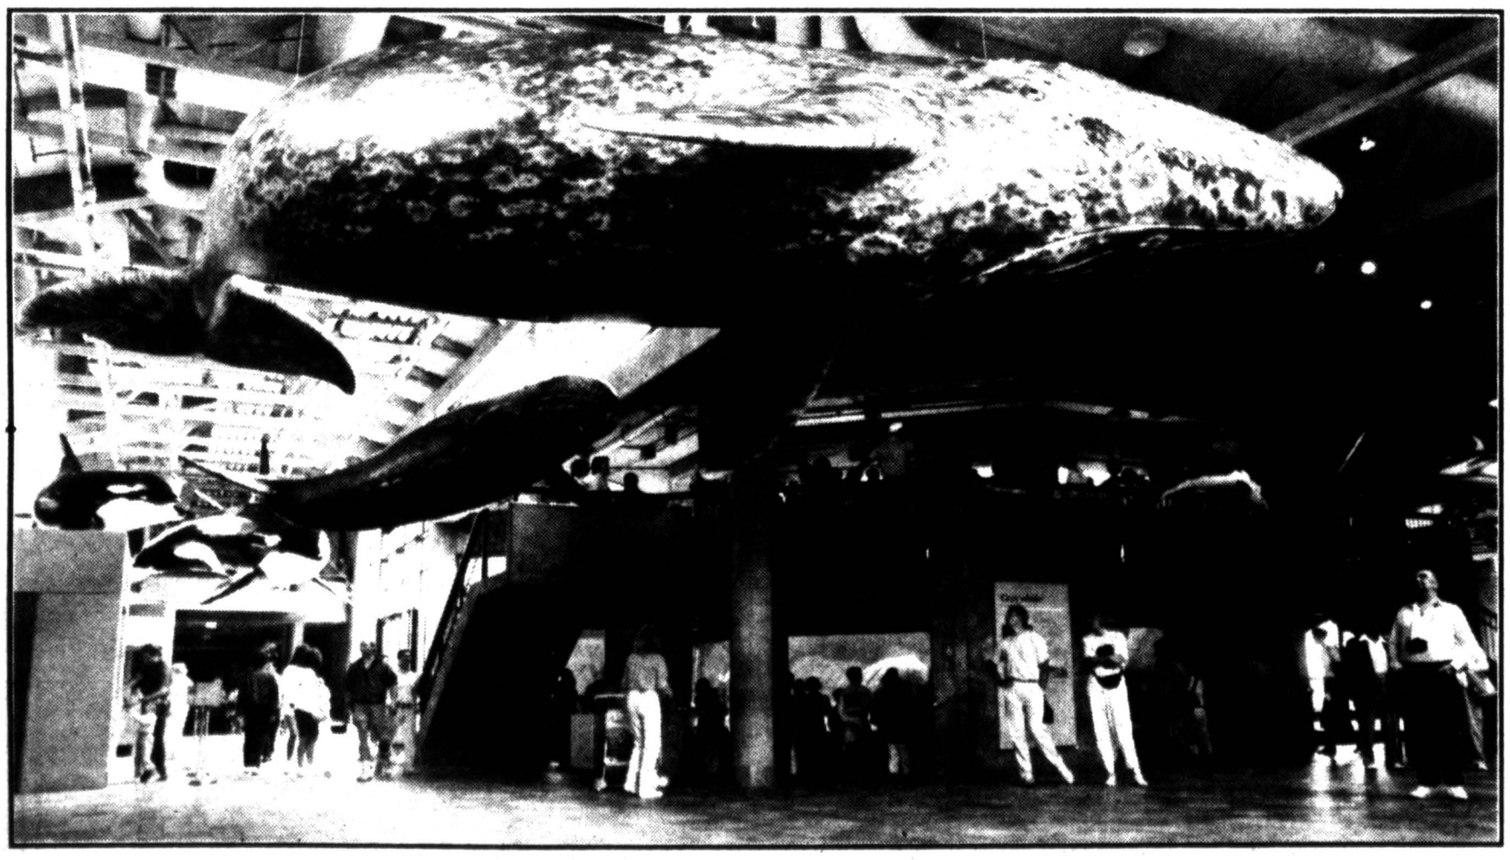


GREAT TIDE POOL

THE GREAT Tide Pool is ringed on three sides by the Monterey Bay Aquarium and on the fourth is separated from the bay by artificial rocks that blend with natural granite outcrops. From the decks, using telescopes or the naked eye, visitors can view the shoreline inhabitants.

AQUARIUM EXHIBIT OFFERS VIDEO LINK TO UNDERSEA WORLD

THE MONTEREY Bay Aquarium is the command center for voyages into inner space with live broadcasts twice a week from the depths of Monterey Bay. "Live from Monterey Canyon" is the first permanent exhibit of its kind in the world.



MARINE MAMMALS GALLERY

A PARADE of marine mammals wends its way overhead into the Marine Mammals Gallery at the Monterey Bay Aquarium. Among the models are these artful replicas of various species found in the bay. This 43-foot gray whale complete with several hundred latex whale lice and barnacles, weighs about 2.300 pounds. If she were real, she would tip the scales at roughly 88,000 pounds.

Britannica LEARNING CENTER
formerly The Reading Game

Blaming only makes the pain go deeper. A youngster's lackluster school performance may stem from a social bind (peer pressure) or lack of confidence that fulfills its own sad prophecy. Whatever the cause, Britannica Learning Center evaluates the struggle and replies via compassionate, time-tested programs in both reading and math. On average, a 48-hour instructional plan means a full year's academic growth.

Britannica Center sets realistic goals that then are practiced a few hours per week. The atmosphere, methods and special incentives can turn previously hated studies into attractive times. (The same approach works for advancement-seeking adults too!)

One call can change lives: 372-2090. Convenient Monterey location: 200 Camino Aquajito...Suite 201. Keeping the promise since 1970.

By MARY RODRIGUEZ

Decked. By Carol Higgins Clark. Dove Audio, Beverly Hills. Abridged: two cassettes; approximately three hours. $16.95.

AND WHAT a fine surprise! Top-ranking mystery writer Mary Higgins Clark artfully narrates the first mystery written by her daughter, Carol Higgins Clark.

Decked introduces a series featuring comely and likeable private investigator Regan Reilly, who solves the mystery of the corpse at her school reunion in England while returning home aboard a luxury liner. It's a far from peaceful voyage with Regan facing more danger and intrigue, but keeping her wits and sense of humor about herself.

The Captive. By Victoria Holt. Read by Donada Peters. Books on Tape, Newport Beach. Unabridged: eight 90-minute cassettes. Monthly rental — $17.50.

Victoria Holt never disappoints if it's a pleasantly exciting romance/mystery you desire.

The time is Holt's favorite era, mid-19th century England. Heroine Rosetta is shipwrecked on a voyage to Africa, kidnaped by pirates, sold to a Turkish pasha.

But she's saved in the nick of time by Simon, the ship's handsome deckhand who faces a false murder charge back in England. Rosetta helps clear him of the allegation.

Narrator Peters has a pleasant British accent.

The Pelican Brief. By John Grisham. Read by Grover Gardner. Books on Tape, Newport Beach. Eight 90-minute cassettes. Monthly rental $18.50.

You'll be looking over your shoulder long after listening to this fascinating thriller. It starts out with the murders of two Supreme Court justices in one night.

Darby Shaw, a beautiful and brilliant New Orleans law student, sees a connection between the murders and a little-noticed oil deal. She writes a brief which falls into the wrong hands.

Suddenly, Darby must run for her life and hide out in the French Quarter, then cross the continent before the killer is brought to trial.

Gardner is brilliant as the reader, using voice changes effectively.

Campy crew cavorts and capers candidly

By TERRY FLORES

GIVE DIRECTOR Patrick Spike a script and he does more than breathe life into it.

He sucks you in.

In his production of the Charles Busch script Vampire Lesbians of Sodom, Spike has his audience well...bitten. The performance, which Spike hopes will run "like forever," reopened with Sleeping Beauty or Coma at the Grovemont Theater Arts Center, 320 Hoffman Ave. in New Monterey. It plays Fridays and Saturdays at 8 p.m. and midnight.

The musical is about an insatiable lesbian succubus who is eternally damned to live off the blood of female virgins. The opening scene is set in front of a cave at the crossroads of the pagan towns of Sodom and Gomorrah. A virgin is about to be sacrificed.

Belly roll

Two scantily clad cave-dweller types, one each from the respective towns, begin with a macho dialogue, but who can take their male pretenses seriously when one of them is already doing an orgiastic belly roll?

We discover their homosexual bents soon after the comically distraught virgin (unmistakably played by Michael Pina who is wrapped in enormous white bow below the waist) begs one of them to rape her in an attempt to save herself from the imminent succubus ritual. With the proposition, the guard cowers and the virgin replies with a dry, "Never mind."

It is then up to the Virgin to defend against the immortal succubus, (Suzanne Burns, formerly of Nunsense) who says she has pretty much seen it all as far as virgins go. The Virgin, however, has more courage than most, and at one point the Succubus seemingly concedes to the spunky girl, saying that were the Virgin a colleague she'd probably have her undying respect. With this, the vampire lesbian issues the traditional neck bite. But there is a twist — Virgin bites back.

And keeps on biting back.

Bad karma?

The two travel through time reincarnated in antagonistic sisterhood (bad karma, I guess) to Hollywood in the 1920s, a modern-day Sodom.

This time, Pina has the upper hand as the actress Madeleine Astarte. Burns is transformed into La Condesa, a silent screen vamp seeking new blood in the form of starlet Renee Vain (Victoria Ledesma).

She doesn't get any from the young Vain; neither does her short suitor King Carlisle (played by Misty-Dawn Sherman) who tries to save her from vampire clutches. Carlisle's efforts are of course in...(well, you know). Astarte wins this one.

And on to Las Vegas to the scene of a dance studio of a famous Broadway dancer (again played by Pina).

By this time, the once-virgin-turned-forever-bloodsucker is feeling the effects of her own immortality, the same numbing sensations the old succubus began experiencing at the height of her career. While at a rehearsal, the succubus returns but has degenerated into a cleaning lady.

The opportunity arises for the vampire dancer to finally destroy her enemy with some African voodoo curse. But just as the curse is about to work, the Vegas vamp finds she cannot follow through with vanquishing a mutual friend — the two have evolved into spiritual symbiots.

Role offered

In the end, she offers the Succubus a role in a new Broadway musical (not surprisingly called Vampire Lesbians of Sodom).

Ultimately, the play draws its lifeblood from its cast (you can tell they all work very well together under the zany stranglehold of Spike's direction). Pina is delightful as the virgin turned bloodsucker. I enjoyed, as did most of the audience, the witty interpretation of a character that might otherwise have turned out cutesy.

Likewise, Burns is both boisterous and unpretentious as the aging vampire lesbian. I might add that Etienne (played by Donavan Dolan) imparted a new meaning to the phrase "on edge" with his portrayal of La Condesa's butler (check out his hair).

Vampire Lesbians of Sodom* (cast shown above) has started new run.

Tuesday night will feature Miss Fialkowska in Mozart's Piano Concert K. 449 in E Minor as well as the festival orchestra in Haydn's Symphony No. 94 in G Major, 'The Surprise.' Bruno Weil is working on a project to record all of Haydn's symphonies for SONY Classical with program notes by H.C. Robbins Landon."

• "Maestro Bruce Lamott, Festival Chorale director and education coordinator, has again been asked by Maestro Weil to program and conduct the Founders' Memorial Concert of early music at Carmel Mission Basilica."

• "Friday night, Bruno Weil will conduct the companion piece to last year's successful Creation by Haydn — The Seasons, sung in German. The seasonal theme will be carried out in a Saturday morning recital performance of Vivaldi's The Seasons led by Elizabeth Wallfisch."

• "The popular lieder series in historical Casa Serrano in Monterey will be continued with David Gordon, Maria Venuti and Daniel Lichti, who will be the only singer to be accompanied by pianist Janina Fialkowska. HOW THIS RAKE CAN SAVE YOUR LIFE.

This simple garden tool is a firefighter. It can help you clear away brush and leaves that act like kindling around your home. And you.

So if you live near the forest, do a little raking. And that's not all. Landscape your home with a fire-retardant plant like ivy. Use spark arrester screens on your chimney and vents. And put fire retardant material on your roof and underneath your house where it is exposed.

Because a forest fire burns more than trees.

SMOKEY

Remember.
Only you can prevent forest fires.
